

Call for applications for a research overview on asylum processes for LGBTQ persons

The Migration Studies Delegation (Delmi) is announcing a call for applications for a research overview concerning asylum processes for LGBTQ persons in a European perspective.

What does the research say on the processes of asylum in European countries for LGBTQ persons? Do they differ from other cases where vulnerable persons apply for asylum, are there differences between countries in a European context, and what can be said on the different approaches of countries in this matter?

Delmi is announcing a call for applications for a research overview regarding LGBTQ asylum seekers and the experiences from different countries in a European perspective. The research overview should cover topics such as (but not limited to) differences of processing and handling of vulnerable groups, specifically LGBTQ persons, in a European context, potential challenges, and best practices regarding these cases. Focus should be on a systematic review of the current literature with the aim of giving insight into both the differences between European countries as well as the processes on at EU-level.

The maximum grant allowed is 100,000 SEK (excluding social fees). The research overview should be written in Swedish or English and in a way that is accessible to a larger audience while still holding academic relevance. The length of the study should be no longer than 22,500 words (excluding references).

Application

Apply by sending a project proposal along with your CV to ju.delmi@regeringskansliet.se. Mark the application with registration number [Komm2021/00679/Ju 2013:17].

The project proposal should include a project description, budget and time plan. For instructions on how to write your project proposal, please refer to Guidelines for project proposal.

Last day for applications: 15th September 2021.

Criteria and terms

To apply you need to hold the degree of PhD and should be affiliated to a university (or equivalent). The applications will be judged on the quality of the application as well as the applicants' previous merits. The applications will be reviewed by the responsible research coordinator in consultation with the responsible delegation member at Delmi.

Funded projects are expected to deliver a first draft within six months after approval of the project and deliver the final product including a separate research brief no later than four months after feedback on the first draft. Funded authors are expected to participate in a presentation of the project arranged by Delmi, either in the form of a seminar, webinar or podcast.
